AMERICAN COLLEGE OF CULINARY & LANGUAGE ARTS

INTEGRATED CRUISE CULINARY PROGRAM

Your ticket to a successful culinary career on a cruise ship

A strong foundation in the basics is key to being a success. Sailing international waters brings with it a whole set of standards and practices that must be met. Through our Integrated Cruise Culinary Program (ICCP), ACCLA offers you rigorous training in skills and in-depth knowledge of concepts that will help you not just meet these standards but surpass them to climb the ranks.

We focus on:

- Preparation of food (Continental)
- Hygiene practices
- Storage and food handling
- Maintaining sanitation standards

Our ICCP program involves extensive all-round training by culinary experts to prepare you for entry level positions on leading luxury cruise lines. It includes three months of classroom sessions and six to 12 months of industrial training for hands-on experience across the board. Students must be 16-27 years, have successfully completed Class 10, have basic English skills and a positive attitude to be eligible for this course.

What our students say about us

TILGU STEPHEN

“ Studying at ACCLA was one of the best decisions I have ever made. The chefs here are very knowledgeable and enthusiastic about teaching. From day one, I was given technical and soft skills as well as overall moulding of my personality. After this course, I feel like a different person, and firmly believe I am on my way to realising my dream career of being a chef. ”

ABU B. S. KOYA

“ The ICCP course constantly reminds us to be on our best behaviour while polishing our technical skills. The program is helping me in many ways and is preparing me for my work and career. Joining this course has been a life-changing decision. ”

AJIT RAIKAR

“ Studying at ACCLA was the experience of a lifetime. It is nice to have an academy in Goa that offers culinary courses and campus interviews for placements on cruise ships. I learnt a lot at this institute. ”

Why choose ACCLA for your cruise culinary program

Specialised in culinary arts education, the American College of Culinary & Language Arts (ACCLA) merges high quality training with personality development to produce professionals ready to be absorbed into thriving kitchens and galleys. We are officially recognised by the Maritime Administrator of the Marshall Islands according to the Maritime Labour Convention for training and examination of ships' cooks.

Our students are able to fit seamlessly into cruise ship life and immediately take on the roles and responsibilities of their positions thanks to our rigorous hands-on training and skill development.

Our expert faculty have the combined experience of nearly 20 years in hospitality and catering, having worked with leading hotels and cruise lines around the world.

Our facilities are modelled after real time galley spaces, designed by industry experts in line with international standards. The fully air-conditioned space with imported equipment and individual work stations allows students to be completely at ease in large scale working conditions by the end of their program.

Our program modules and syllabi are constantly updated with the latest cruise culinary trends and knowledge, with meticulously planned sessions for easy comprehension and effective transfer of skills.

Work Life on Cruises

- Cruise ships hire many workers that work only during specific seasons, who then head back to the mainland for the remainder of the year.
- Many cruise line also offer options to work and play on board year round, so you can actually live on the ship while enjoying the cruise ship lifestyle.
- Your dream job in the hospitality and travel industry just may be aboard your favorite cruise line; if you're undecided, here below are seven benefits to consider.

Work Life on Cruises

Getting paid to travel vs. paying for a trip:

Cruise ship employees stay on board for free, with room and board provided. In addition to having the costs of accommodation covered, many positions offer a salary or hourly wage. CruiseShipJobs.net reports an average tax free salary of $2000-$6500 per month.

Gourmet dining options and free food:

Meals during working hours are usually covered by the company, and you'll get discounts on meals and events at restaurants on board. Holidays and special events may even offer free dining all day for employees and their guests.

Visiting a different country every few months:

International cruises can take you all around the world where you'll rarely visit the same destination twice. It's an opportunity to explore the world and explore new cultures year round. Many positions also offer 'time off' where you might choose to spend a few days off board at your chosen destination.

No bills to pay

Your entire living and working life is covered by the cruise ship, so your wages can go towards a savings or personal expense account. You'll never have to worry about a cable bill, heating costs, or even renting a movie; everything is taken care of by the luxury liner.

Meeting new people every two weeks

Not only will you be working with different team and staff members, but new guests every 10-14 days can also provide some new social contacts. Cruise ships do have restrictions on employee behaviour where you won't be allowed to socialize with passengers, but there are still opportunities to meet new people as you serve them.

Options to grow in your career in hospitality

Cruise ships offer thousands of management and supervisory positions that you can grow into after a few years of experience. If you're considering making the cruise and hospitality industry your career path of choice, apply for jobs above you and work your way to your dream position.

Free entertainment and access to cruise ship amenities

From the oversized swimming pools to seats at a live music event, you'll have easy access to new events year round. Your weeknights and weekends on board will be far from dull. And if you're worried about losing touch with family and friends from the mainland, just take along your laptop or computer. Many cruise ships are now building cybercafes and some even offer wireless internet in the cabins; you can check e-mail, surf the internet.
